ther Stocks Drop Off a Little in Sympathy.

New York, June 19,-The market opened comparatively firm for some shares and a shade higher for others. The firmness, however, did not last long, and on the first call a weaker tone prevailed, owing to a sharp decline in the Vanderbilt shares, which broke 3 per cent, for Lake Shore to 782, 22 for New York Central to 1003, and 12 for Canada Southern to 341. These stocks were unfavorably affected by reports that the Lake Shore earnings for the past quarter were equal only to seven-eighths of 1 per cent, on the capital tock, and, in consequence, no dividend would be declared. Speculation was also adversely influenced by the passing of the Thompson bill and on reports that the paper of a well-known railway capitalist had gone to proknown railway capitalist had gone to protest.

In the forenoon there was a rally of \(\frac{1}{2}\) to \(\frac{7}{2}\) per cent., but in the final sales Lake Shore fell off to 78\(\frac{1}{2}\), Northwestern to 10\(\frac{1}{2}\), Rock Island to 10\(\frac{1}{2}\), and Omaha to 26\(\frac{1}{2}\), all the lowest prices of the day, while Canadian Pacific rose to 40\(\frac{1}{2}\) and Missouri Pacific to 91\(\frac{1}{2}\). The borrowing demand for stocks continues good and all the leading shares command a premium. Railway bonds were irregular. There were some sharp changes in the speculative issues in the early dealings, generally in the direction of lower prices, but at the close a firmer tone prevailed. East Tennessee consols dropped 1\(\frac{1}{2}\) to 53\(\frac{1}{2}\) and recovered to 54.

The sales of stocks to-day aggregated 43\(\frac{1}{2}\), 403 shares, including the following: Central Pacific, 4.11\(\frac{1}{2}\), Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, 50.020; Eric, 4.290; Lake Shore, 81,720; Louisville and Nashville, 4.350; Missouri Pacific, 11.500; Northwestern, 24.400; Naw York Contral 11.550; St. Paul 31.000.

THE ENGLISH BAR-MAID.

How She Looks and Dresses, and the Jargon She Talks.

Liveryoot Letter. I had, however, other reasons for wishing to visit the bar besides a desire to quench my thirst. I had often heard of, but had never yet seen, an English bar-maid, and I was enger to interview a being I had heard so much of, so I was guided by an obsequious waiter through tortuous passages to the billiard room, where the bar was situated. When the door opened a "vision" burst at once on my entranced gaze. Yes, there she stood, a real "English bar-maid," and a mighty pretty one, to boot, She had fair hair and black eyes, a contrast rarely seen, and was dressed in plain black, with white collar and cuffs, and on her well-shaped, sristocratic looking little head she had a bewitching Mother what's a point?" blandly inquired the Hubbard cap. I was, at first, rather at a loss as to what to drink. I knew "cocktails" were not comme il faut, and when I asked for a whisky straight, she replied, "Scotch or not comme il faut, and when I asked for a whisky straight, sho replied, "Scotch or Irish?" I thought sho was inquiring my nationality, so I replied, "No, American, from Chicago." "Sorry we don't keep any, si," said she, with a smile, that made me sinake down to my boots. I afferward learned that she meant Scotch or Irish whisky, but I didn't venture to repeat the request, so fell back on what I thought was sare to be right, namely, brandy and soda. But here again I was destined to be nonplused, for with the same bewitching smile that had first captivated me she said: "Will you have 'four' or 'six'" and "lo you want a 'whole' or a 'baby?" This was Greek to me, so I made a bold stroke and requested "six" and a 'baby." There is nothing like a practical demonstration to teach a man, and I found that 'six and a baby" meant six ponny worth of brandy and a half bottle of soda-water. I then tried to enter into conversation with the Hobe, but found her cold as steel. All the little "mashing" arts I knew of were brought into play, but fell as flat as paucakes. At last I remembered that an Eaglish friend in Chicago had told me to mention his name to any bar-maid in England and I would be sure of a hearty welcome, so I tried the open seasms with my Hobe, and well did the charm work. No longer were the lovely eyes downcast, or did the little rose bud mouth refuse to open, but at the very mention of the name the cycs sparkled find the lissome tongue began to war. "How was he? Had he grown stouter? Was he doing well?" etc., finishing up with, "Now, please drink that off and it will mix you one of his favorite drinks." And right defily did she do it, too, in a manner that would make our best bar men green with envy. During my stay in, Liverpool I had many talks with her, and found her a highly educated and accomplished girl.

FREEDOM FOR THE FOOT. The Reminine Foot No Longer Pinchad, But Once More Free and Shapely.

New York Letter. Speaking of personal appearance the fashionable boot of woman has undergone a sudden and radical change. Only a few months ago it was wholly artificial in shape and as unnatural in size es squeezing could make it. The toes were brought to a sharp point and the apparent heel was directly under the instep, while the real one projected behind the high support. You are familiar oneugh with that kind of pedal distortion, because it was for several years in fashion and a majority of finely dressed women submitted to its forture. It did not permit of natural walking, but gave rise, of necessity, to that mineing gait which we have almost come to regard as characteristic of femininity. But at the point where further remodeling of the foot would have nearly approached the Chinese kind of disfiguration there came a reaction, and the foot of the New York belle of to-day is set flatly and squarely on the ground. The reformation has been produced by the vegue into which athlectic sports have come with the ordinarily all-too-gentle sex. Pedestrianism has struck popularity with our familiar enough with that kind of pedal by the vogue into which athlectic sports have come with the ordinarily all-too-gentle sex. Pedestrianism has struck popularity with our city young women, and lazy case is for the time in disfavor. Exercise afoot was found to be hardly a diversion in the high-heeled and narrow-toed shoes, and therefore a change was wrought in a few weeks which physicians and dress reformers could not have effected in a century of argument.

The shoe of 1884's sammer has a heel of less than an inch in height and placed where it belongs. The toe is round and wide. The entire outline is not quite that of a natural human foot, but as nearly so as provious condition of compression permits. The material is not the inclastic glazed stuff long in use, bet soft callskin of the same kind used in men's shoes. The make is masculine, even in such details as beyeled soles and yellow stitching, and especially in the fact that the surface is not to be daubed with a black, shiny varnish, but blackened with pignent and brush, in the way herefofore distinctively and exclusively mate. The exception in this latter respect is the shoot made of real or imitation crocodile skin, reddish yellow in color, and making the wearer look as though on her way to a base ball match. An artist friend, rapturous on the subject, declared that an area of naturalness had at last begun, and that uncontracted waists would be the next happy attainment on the part of our fashionable girls.

"See that foot?" he exclaimed, referring to

"See that foot?" he exclaimed, referring to one that was protruding from under the hom of a skirt across the car in which we were riding. "It isn't expressionless, like a bunch of bones, sinows, and skin, with every bit of fat long ago pressed out; it isn't the foot of a Chinese lady, nor of a mummy dried a thousand years ago; it is mobile, instinct with life, shapely, free—in short, just the foot that ought to be on a pretty and lively
